It was consensual – interactions with Ren at RDC 2025

The last few days have completely turned my world upside down and as most of you know, the events have sent me into complete despair. I am still struggling to come to terms with this new reality, but I am no longer at a point where I do not see a way out.

Thus, I have decided to fight for my name and my business as both have been completely and unfairly ruined by Ren's accusations.

As described in this document and supported and documented by our conversations it is clear that

- The interactions between me and Ren were entirely consensual
- The messages from Ren were encouraging in nature both before, under and after RDC and did in no way indicate any form of displeasure.
- Ren retroactively decided that our encounter constituted an assault once I had declined to continue our relationship weeks after RDC.

On April 9th, Ren published a document on Twitter accusing me of sexually assaulting her at RDC. The document is full of screenshots and her making up my intentions.

I am by no means a perfect person. My autism causes me to have poorly developed social antennas that make it hard for me to read subtle social signals. I do, however, understand the concept and importance of consent.

I can understand that Ren is struggling and that our relationship has caused emotional stress. For that, I am sorry – but feelings are not facts and what Ren may be feeling right now does not in any shape or form align with the events as they happened.

I have been accused of a serious crime – sexual assault. Any such serious claim should be backed by serious evidence as the consequences for the accused are massive. No formal complaint has been logged at relevant authorities neither at the time of the alleged assault nor now at the time of accusation.

I am left to respond to the accusations posted on Twitter. It seems that the burden of proof has thus been turned completely on its head. Ren claims an assault took place and I must now prove that it did not.

There are a lot of accusations raised against me in the document – from the main accusation down to the sinister meaning of each message I have sent. I cannot possibly respond to each of these accusations so I will focus on the most serious one – that I planned and executed an assault on Ren.

It is impossible for me to prove decisively what happened in that hotel room as only Ren and I were present. I can only give an account of my actions and my thinking at the time but that will just be my words against Rens. The best way for me to prove that no assault took place is to publish our subsequent conversations.

The messages are intensely private in nature, and I would prefer not to publish them, but I do not feel that Ren has left me any choice.
